Press Release

Pine Bluff, Arkansas

Central Moloney, Inc. is pleased and excited to announce its intention to expand our current transformer facility located in Pine Bluff, Arkansas.

Since its inception in 1949, Central Moloney, Inc. has been an industry leader in manufacturing electrical distribution transformers and related components parts. With two facilities located in Jefferson County, Arkansas, our commitment has been and will remain to our community.

This expansion includes a 150,000 square foot addition to our current operating facility. Proposed construction will occur on existing Central Moloney, Inc. property that formally housed a rented livestock auction barn.

Most excitingly this expansion has the potential to add two hundred primary jobs to the Pine Bluff economy.

While the project consists of an initial investment in excess of $12 million, we recognize that our expansion and job creation through this project will generate an exponential impact to the community.

It is the intense desire of Central Moloney, Inc. to remain a beacon in our industry and our community. Even during these tough economic times and a poor housing market we have been successful in obtaining new customers, which has in turn increased our market share. By increasing our output we position ourselves for meeting the demands of an ever-changing transformer marketplace.

We have yet to formalize an anticipated start date for construction. Our efforts to date focus on designing a facility to meet the needs of our customer base. Further announcements can be expected as we near the beginning phase of construction.
